The Drumbeat Of 'Drill Baby Drill' Dawns In Ill.

Brown
Rudnick

The recent denial of a preliminary injunction against the Illinois Department of Natural Resources' new hydraulic fracturing regulations is a victory for the state's nascent shale oil and gas industry and, while the regulations must still survive a decision on the merits, the denial moves Illinois closer to the benefits of modern shale development, say Alexander Obrecht and George Tzanetopoulos of BakerHostetler LLP.

How To Get The Most Out Of Your Associates

Law firms put in serious time and money to hire the best crop of new associates. These bright, young women and men are ready to work — and work hard — but how do partners and managers ensure new hires are performing at their very best? Here are four things to think about to maximize your associates' potential.

Law360's Weekly Verdict: Legal Lions & Lambs

Loeb & Loeb LLP lawyers lead this week's legal lions with a come-from-behind victory for Sony Corp. in a copyright infringement case. Our legal lambs are led to slaughter by Squire Patton Boggs LLP, which will have to face a fee recovery claim in California from an insurance company related to its work as counsel for a policyholder.

Drinker Biddle Guts Ex-Atty's $30M Wrongful Firing Suit

A California judge on Thursday tossed most claims in a former Drinker Biddle & Reath LLP associate's $30 million suit alleging the firm wrongfully terminated her for voicing opposition to an attorney job candidate, adding she might have thrown out all the claims if Drinker had asked.
